THE BIG STORY · YOUR SHOPPING BILL

Prices rise 6.09% in a year, breaking the RBI's comfort ceiling, and the stock market's three-day winning run ends

Food was the main culprit: food prices were 8.94% higher in October than a year ago. Add costlier oil and a weaker rupee, and investors decided to take some money off the table.

India's retail inflation, the yearly rise in the prices of things households buy, climbed to 6.09% in October from 5.54% in September, 5paisa reports. That's just above 6%, the top of the band the Reserve Bank of India (RBI) is meant to keep inflation within. The biggest push came from the kitchen: food inflation jumped to 8.94% from 7.74%.

How the market took it. The Sensex fell 318.56 points (0.39%) to 81,592.45 and the Nifty 50 fell 155.05 points (0.61%) to 25,144.30, ending a three-day rise. The Nifty touched a low of 25,054.40 during the day. Every major sector index closed lower: real estate fell the most (–1.69%) after Thursday's big jump, followed by metals, car makers and banks. Makers of everyday goods (FMCG) barely moved (–0.01%).

Three worries at once. Besides inflation, Brent crude oil rose to around $95.70 a barrel, from roughly $92 at the previous session, after attacks on Saudi energy sites and more trouble in the Strait of Hormuz (page 3). And the rupee slipped 0.2% to ₹94.24 per dollar, pushed by dearer oil and rising US interest rates (page 2).

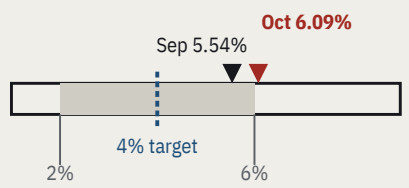

The calm underneath. India's "fear gauge", the India VIX, actually fell 6.5% to 15.54, a sign traders don't expect wild swings. And foreign investors kept buying: on Thursday they bought a net ₹7,830.60 crore of shares, their ninth buying day in a row, and about $8 billion so far in November.

INFLATION VS THE RBI'S BAND

Scale: each 1% = 25 px. Sketch for illustration.

ⓘ NEW TO THIS? WORDS FROM TODAY'S STORY

CPI inflation
How much more a typical basket of household goods costs than a year ago. CPI stands for Consumer Price Index.

Tolerance band
The RBI aims for 4% inflation but accepts anything from 2% to 6%. Above 6% is a warning light.

India VIX
The market's "fear gauge": it rises when traders expect big swings and falls when they feel calm.

FII / DII
Foreign and domestic institutional investors: big funds from abroad and from India. On Thursday, foreigners bought while Indian funds sold ₹6,331 crore.

WHAT THIS MEANS FOR YOU

6% inflation means something that cost ₹1,000 last October costs about ₹1,061 now, and your vegetable bill has risen even faster. Two practical takeaways: money sitting in a savings account earning 3% is quietly losing value, and loans may not get cheaper soon, because the RBI is unlikely to cut interest rates while inflation is above its ceiling.

VARSITY-STYLE EXPLAINER: WHY DO SHARES FALL WHEN PRICES RISE?

When inflation runs hot, the RBI may keep interest rates high (or raise them) to cool spending. Higher rates make loans dearer for companies and families, which can slow sales and profits. They also make safe options like fixed deposits more tempting compared with shares. So investors sell a little, "just in case".

BUSINESS BRIEFS

POWER
A giant power plan

Clean Max has proposed a power project worth nearly ₹50,000 crore in Andhra Pradesh, 5paisa reports. It is a proposal, not yet a final deal.

SHARES
100 shares become 1,800?

SC Agrotech has proposed a stock split plus bonus shares that could turn 100 shares into 1,800, 5paisa reports. Page 6 explains how splits and bonuses work.

MOVERS
Hitting the ceiling

Bonfiglioli, E2E Networks and Kennametal led the list of shares that hit their "upper circuit", the most a share is allowed to rise in one day.

TECH SLIPS AGAIN · RATE-HIKE FEARS · BITCOIN DROPS

THE BIG STORY · WALL STREET'S SPLIT FRIDAY

Tech shares drag the Nasdaq down almost 1% as Nvidia's turmoil and rising interest rates bite, but grocery and oil companies hold the Dow up

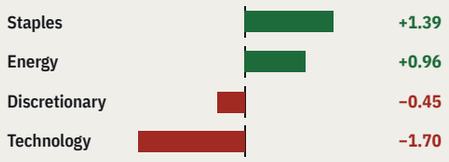

Investors moved money from exciting-but-risky tech companies to steady, boring ones that sell food, soap and fuel. Even so, all three main US indices ended the week higher.

On Friday the Nasdaq, home to most big technology companies, fell 229.82 points (0.91%) to 25,136.27. The S&P 500, which tracks 500 large US companies, lost 30.73 points (0.4%) to 7,561.67. But the Dow Jones edged up 50.46 points (0.1%) to 52,347.55, Xinhua reports. Six of the S&P's 11 sectors rose: consumer staples (everyday goods) gained 1.39% and energy 0.96%, while technology fell 1.7%.

Why tech fell. Nvidia, the world's leading AI-chip maker, is still in shock after founder Jensen Huang resigned on Thursday; finance chief Colette Kress is interim CEO and a search for a permanent boss has begun. The board says it has no reason to believe company secrets were compromised, and an independent investigation continues, VistaP Global reports.

Why rates matter. The yield on the US 10-year government bond rose to 5.15%. US consumer prices rose 0.4% in October alone, and traders now expect the US Federal Reserve to raise interest rates by a quarter point at its 8–9 December meeting. That's a market guess, not a decision. When safe government bonds pay over 5%, shares, especially pricey tech shares, look less attractive.

WHY SHOULD SOMEONE IN MUMBAI CARE?

Oil settled at $95.84 a barrel for Brent and $88.56 for America's WTI, though both were heading for a weekly fall of about 2.5%, VistaP Global reports. India buys most of its oil abroad, so these prices feed straight into petrol, airfares and the rupee (page 1). And if the US Fed does raise rates in December, global investors may find America's 5%-plus bond returns more tempting than Indian shares. So far, they're still buying India.

JARGON BUSTER

Consumer staples
Companies selling things people buy in good times and bad: food, toothpaste, detergent.

Sector rotation
Investors shifting money from one type of company to another, like from tech to staples.

PPI
Producer Price Index: the prices businesses get for their goods. It rose 0.3% in October, a bit less than expected.

Federal Reserve
America's central bank, its version of the RBI. It sets US interest rates.

FORECAST

WHO'S DOING WHAT, AND WHY IT MATTERS

THE BIG STORY · IRAN WAR · STRAIT OF HORMUZ

"We don't need a deal with Iran," says Trump, pulling his vice-president off peace talks as more tankers are hit in the Gulf

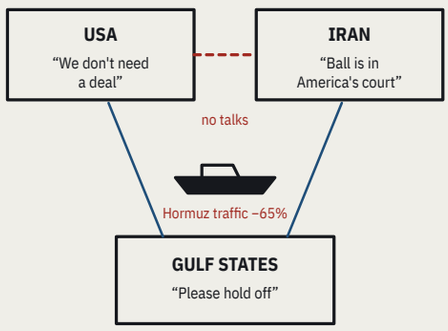

A day after talk of talks, Washington stepped back. Tehran says the ball is in America's court. Meanwhile, ships keep striking mines.

US President Donald Trump said on Thursday he had taken Vice-President JD Vance off the Iran peace talks to focus on domestic matters, adding: "We don't need a deal with Iran. Those days have long since passed," the New York Times reports. Iran's parliament speaker Mohammad Bagher Ghalibaf replied that Iran had sent a list of demands and is still waiting for an American answer, Middle East Eye reports.

The neighbours want calm. Trump said Saudi Arabia, the UAE, Qatar and Kuwait asked him to hold off on large-scale attacks on Iran, but that he is "not sure" he agrees, and that he would strike "without hesitation" if US ships or allies were threatened.

At sea. Iran's Revolutionary Guards claim two supertankers were disabled by explosions on Wednesday, two more tankers hit mines on Thursday, and a gas tanker struck a mine and exploded on Friday, Reuters reports. They also claim to have destroyed a US radar in Bahrain. These are Iranian claims, not independently confirmed. What's clear: shipping through the strait has collapsed, with traffic down about 65%, Gulf News reports.

WHO SAYS WHAT

Quotes from NYT and Middle East Eye. Traffic figure from Gulf News.

THE INDIA ANGLE

This war is now showing up in Indian prices. Brent crude near $96 helped push the rupee to ₹94.24 and adds to the inflation that hit 6.09% in October (page 1). Each tanker attack raises shipping insurance and freight costs for cargo heading to India. Closer to home, Pakistan's military says it killed 74 militants over about 10 days and alleged that India and Afghanistan back the fighters; both countries deny it, ABC News reports. And in Assam, at least 24 people died when a bus hit a container truck near Kaziranga National Park on Friday.

UKRAINE

Biggest prisoner swap

Russia and Ukraine agreed a prisoner exchange that President Zelenskyy called the largest since the full-scale invasion; numbers weren't given, Democracy Now reports. Drone attacks continued both ways overnight.

Why it matters: a rare sign of cooperation as US envoys push for a peace deal.

GAZA

Cold and floods

A nine-month-old baby died of hypothermia in a tent in Khan Younis. The UN's aid chief said 150,000 tents are stuck in warehouses at Gaza's borders as winter floods hit.

Why it matters: about 350,000 displaced people face flooding and cold.

SPACE · TECH

Starshield row

Zelenskyy said new limits on SpaceX's Starshield service were hurting Ukraine's drone defences. SpaceX told Axios that was "false" and "there has been no change".

AIR FORCE · THE BIG STORY

The first Tejas Mk1A fighter may finally reach the Air Force in January, almost three years late

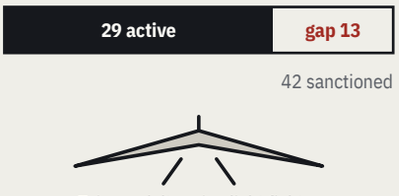

India's home-built light fighter is the key to rebuilding an Air Force that has fallen to its lowest strength in 60 years.

The first one or two Tejas Mk1A jets could be handed over to the Indian Air Force (IAF) in January 2027, ahead of the Aero India air show, ThePrint reports, citing a source. The IAF ordered the first 83 of these jets from Hindustan Aeronautics (HAL) for ₹36,400 crore in February 2021. Deliveries were meant to begin in February 2024; that deadline was missed.

What held it up? Mainly engines. The Tejas uses an American GE F404 engine, and GE had shipped only 14 of 99 engines ordered under a 2021 deal by September 2026, ThePrint says. A second order for 97 more Mk1A jets, worth over ₹62,370 crore, was placed in September 2025, with deliveries expected from 2027–28.

Why it matters so much. The IAF has just 29 active fighter squadrons against the 42 it is supposed to have. The new air chief, Air Chief Marshal Ashutosh Dixit, who took charge at the end of October, has called the Tejas, its bigger sibling the Mk2, the future stealth fighter AMCA and Indian-made weapons the IAF's "highest priority". His words: "We will fight with Indian solutions."

The Reading Room

THREE PIECES OF GREAT WRITING, AND WHAT TO LEARN FROM THEM

A weekend menu: how to choose a career that actually fits you, how the city you live in quietly shapes your ambitions, and what really happens when a company splits its shares or hands out bonus ones.

01

LIFE · WORK | A LONG WEEKEND READ

"How to Pick a Career (That Actually Fits You)" by Tim Urban, Wait But Why

In one line: stop choosing your career like a one-time exam answer, and start treating it like a series of experiments based on what you really want and what you're really good at.

Tim Urban, with his trademark stick-figure drawings, splits the problem into two halves: your "Want Box" (what you'd love your life to look like) and your "Reality Box" (your abilities and the real world's opportunities). Then he takes apart the outdated ideas we inherit from parents and society, such as the belief that a career path is a straight line. It's long, funny and genuinely useful at any age, whether you're 22 or 42.

STEAL THIS TRICK

Give abstract ideas a simple picture. Urban turns fuzzy feelings into boxes and diagrams, so readers can "see" the argument and remember it.

CITIES · AMBITION | 10 MIN READ

"Cities and Ambition" by Paul Graham

In one line: every great city whispers a message about what matters most, and that message slowly shapes the people who live there.

Graham argues that New York tells you to be richer, Cambridge (Massachusetts) to be smarter, Silicon Valley to be more powerful, and so on. You don't hear it in words; you pick it up from what people talk about and admire. His advice: notice your city's message, and if it isn't pushing you towards what you care about, consider finding one that does. A fun one to argue about over chai: what is Mumbai's message?

STEAL THIS TRICK

One bold claim, then examples. Graham states his big idea in the first lines, then proves it city by city, so readers always know where he's going.

MONEY · INDIA | 15 MIN READ

"Five Corporate Actions and Their Impact on Stock Prices" by Zerodha Varsity

In one line: dividends, bonus shares, stock splits, rights issues and buybacks, explained in plain English, with what each one does to the share price.

The next chapter in Varsity's beginner series, after yesterday's look at clearing and settlement, and perfectly timed: SC Agrotech's proposed split and bonus is in today's business briefs (page 1). The key lesson: a split or bonus gives you more shares, but each share is worth proportionally less, so your total investment doesn't magically grow. It's like cutting a pizza into more slices: same pizza.

STEAL THIS TRICK

Use small, round numbers. Varsity's worked examples use simple figures, so readers follow the logic instead of the arithmetic.

The Book Review

TODAY: SELF-HELP

Genre: Self-help · work and focus
First published: 2016
Author: Cal Newport, a computer science professor
Length: about 300 pages
Read it: one rule per weekend

REVIEW · DEEP WORK

In a world of pings and scrolling, the ability to concentrate hard is becoming rare, and that makes it a superpower

Cal Newport starts with a simple idea. There are two kinds of work. Shallow work is answering emails, sitting in meetings and replying to messages: necessary, easy to do while distracted, and easy for anyone to copy. Deep work is focused, uninterrupted thinking that stretches your brain to its limit, the kind that produces a great report, a new skill or a hard problem solved. His central claim: deep work is getting rarer just as it is getting more valuable.

The book is full of examples. The psychologist Carl Jung built a stone tower in the Swiss village of Bollingen as a retreat for writing. J.K. Rowling checked into a hotel to finish the last Harry Potter book. Bill Gates took "think weeks" away from everything to read and plan. You don't need a tower, Newport says; you need a routine.

The second half gives four rules: work deeply (schedule focus time like a meeting), embrace boredom (stop reaching for your phone at every pause), quit social media (or at least ask whether each app really earns its place) and drain the shallows (shrink the busywork). Some advice suits professors more than office workers, and the tone can be preachy. But few books are this practical.

"Clarity about what matters provides clarity about what does not."

Cal Newport, on why choosing your priorities makes saying "no" easier.

THREE THINGS THIS BOOK TEACHES

Pick your style

Newport describes four ways to fit deep work in: hermit-like, in blocks of days, a daily habit, or whenever a gap appears. Most of us suit the daily habit.

Switching costs

Every time you glance at your phone, part of your attention stays stuck there. He calls it "attention residue".

Have a shutdown ritual

End the workday with a set routine, so your brain knows work is over and can truly rest.

THE TAKE · OUR OPINION

A big defeat before a big decider is not a disaster. It's a free lesson, if India use it

Losing by 244 runs hurts. Being bowled out for 89 hurts more. But context matters: India still lead the series 2–1, with one game left on Sunday, and a new captain was finding his feet.

The best teams treat a heavy defeat the way good investors treat a market crash: don't panic, study it. Was it the pitch, the swing, the shot selection? Matt Henry's 6 for 27 will be replayed in India's dressing room, and it should be. New Zealand's conditions, with seam and bounce, are exactly what India will face in the two Tests from 19 November.

Our view: one bad day tells you less than five good ones. Sunday will tell us whether this was a blip or a warning. The same goes for one red day on the stock market.

This is the Gazette's opinion.

MONEY IDEA OF THE DAY: REAL RETURN

If your fixed deposit pays 7% and prices rise 6%, your money only grows by about 1% in what it can actually buy. That's your real return: the interest rate minus inflation. Always compare what your savings earn with what prices are doing.

How to tie your shoelaces so they stay tied all day

Laces that keep coming undone usually have one of two problems: a "granny knot" tied the wrong way round, or a bow with only one wrap. Fix both and you'll never kneel down mid-walk again.

WHAT YOU'LL NEED

Shoes with laces long enough for a bow	A chair or step to rest your foot on	Two minutes of practice

1 Tie the starting knot

Cross the laces into an X and tuck one end under and through, then pull both ends tight. Remember which lace went on top: say, left over right.

2 Make the first loop

Fold the right lace into a loop (a "bunny ear") and pinch its base with your fingers.

3 Wrap twice, not once

Wrap the left lace around the loop two full times, instead of the usual once. This creates a little tunnel with two wraps.

4 Push through both wraps

Push a bit of the left lace, folded into a second loop, through the tunnel so it passes under both wraps.

5 Pull the loops tight

Hold one loop in each hand and pull them apart firmly. The double wrap grips like a clamp. To untie, just pull a loose end, as usual.

6 Check the bow

A good bow sits across the shoe. If it twists to point up and down the shoe, it's a granny knot: retie, starting the first knot the other way (right over left).

GOOD BOW VS GRANNY KNOT

The double wrap is what makes this bow secure.

⚠ SAFETY

- Tie laces sitting down or with your foot on a low step, not balancing on one leg on stairs.
- Loose, trailing laces are a trip hazard on escalators and stairs: tuck long ends in.
- Don't pull so tight that your foot tingles; laces shouldn't cut off circulation.

PRO TIP

Fraying laces? Wrap a bit of clear tape tightly around the end to make an instant new aglet (see page 9).
