THE BIG STORY · A BREATHER AFTER THE SPRINT

The Sensex barely moves, but property and bank shares shine while car makers and FMCG take a rest

After rising almost 10% in November, the market spent Thursday going up and down without getting far. Underneath the flat headline, smaller companies kept climbing.

The Sensex ended Thursday at 81,911.01, up just 31.61 points (0.04%), and the Nifty 50 at 25,299.35, up 44.30 points (0.18%), HDFC Sky reports. Kotak Neo called it a "volatile and range-bound" session: prices swung during the day but finished almost where they began. It was still the Nifty's third rise in a row.

The quiet winners. Away from the giants, more shares rose than fell (2,377 up, 1,878 down on the NSE), and the Nifty Smallcap index gained about 1.1%. The day's star sector was real estate: the Nifty Realty index jumped between 3.7% and 4.5% (the two sources differ slightly). Insurers and lenders led the Nifty: HDFC Life, Shriram Finance (+3.6%), Bajaj Finance (+3.4%) and SBI (+2.4%).

The resters. Car makers fell about 1%, with M&M down 1.9% a day after its 5% jump, and makers of everyday goods (FMCG) slipped, with Nestlé down 2.1% and HUL lower too. Analysts call this profit booking: people selling shares that rose fast, to pocket the gains.

Why so cautious? HDFC Sky points to two weights: interest rates on US government bonds are near 5% (page 2 explains why that matters), and the rupee weakened to 94.03 per dollar. Foreign investors are still buyers, though: they bought about ₹12,563 crore of shares on Wednesday alone, and about $6.43 billion so far in November.

ⓘ NEW TO THIS? WORDS FROM TODAY'S STORY

Range-bound
Prices moving up and down inside a narrow band, without a clear direction.

Profit booking
Selling a share that has risen to "lock in" the gain. It often pulls prices down after a rally.

FMCG
Fast-moving consumer goods: everyday items like soap, biscuits and toothpaste.

EBITDA
A company's earnings before interest, taxes and some accounting costs; a rough measure of how well the core business runs.

WHAT THIS MEANS FOR YOU

Gold and silver got cheaper on Thursday. On India's MCX exchange, December gold futures fell 1.15% to ₹1,38,114 per 10 g and silver 1.59% to ₹1,81,592 a kg (Kotak Neo). These are futures prices; your jeweller's rate will differ. If you're buying wedding gold, dips like this are worth watching. The weaker rupee (94.03) makes foreign trips and imported gadgets a touch dearer.

VARSITY-STYLE EXPLAINER: WHY A "FLAT" DAY ISN'T BORING

A Sensex change of 0.04% sounds like nothing happened. But inside it, property shares jumped 4% and car shares fell 1%. Think of a train where some passengers walk forward and others walk back: the train's speed hardly changes, yet everyone moved. That's sector rotation, money shifting from one group of shares to another.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

RESULTS
Oil India's big quarter
Oil India's profit rose 53% to ₹2,521 crore in July–September, and IRCTC's revenue grew 19.5%, Kotak Neo reports.

NVIDIA'S BOSS QUITS · BOND RATES HIT 5% · OIL JUMPS

THE BIG STORY · THE END OF AN ERA AT THE WORLD'S AI CHIP GIANT

Jensen Huang, who co-founded Nvidia and led it for more than 30 years, resigns "effective immediately"

Finance chief Colette Kress steps in as interim boss. The shares fell as much as 14% during the day before recovering part of the loss.

Nvidia's official filing on Thursday was short and plain: Jensen Huang has resigned as president, chief executive and board member, effective immediately. Colette Kress, the chief financial officer since 2013, becomes interim CEO while keeping her finance job, until a permanent successor is chosen, and Harvey C. Jones becomes the company's first-ever board chair. The filing gives no reason. News reports link it to scrutiny of Huang's personal conduct, following Wednesday's report that the board was preparing to remove him; Nvidia itself has not said so.

Investors were rattled. Nvidia shares fell as much as about 14% during the day and closed 4.34% lower at $166.19, Eurasia Business News reports, citing CNBC. The company still plans to report its quarterly results on Tuesday, 17 November.

The other worry: interest rates. The yield on the US 10-year government bond rose back above 5%, to about 5.10%, as traders bet the US central bank will raise rates again in December to fight inflation (prices rose 0.4% in October). Higher rates make borrowing dearer and shares less attractive. The S&P 500 fell 0.35% to 7,592.40, the Dow 0.36% to 52,297.09 and the Nasdaq 0.39% to 25,366.09. Smaller US companies did worst: the Russell 2000 fell 1.66%.

WHO RUNS NVIDIA NOW

Interim CEO: Colette Kress (also stays CFO)
Board chair: Harvey C. Jones (a new post)

WHY SHOULD SOMEONE IN MUMBAI CARE?

Two reasons. First, oil: Brent crude jumped 3.3% to $95.82 a barrel after attacks on Saudi energy sites and more trouble for ships in the Strait of Hormuz (page 3). India buys most of its oil from abroad, so pricier oil can mean costlier petrol and a weaker rupee. Second, US interest rates near 5% tempt global investors to park money safely in America instead of in markets like India. So far foreigners are still buying Indian shares, but this is the number to watch.

JARGON BUSTER

Interim CEO
A temporary boss who runs the company until a permanent one is found.

Bond yield
The yearly return you get for lending to a government. When it rises, loans everywhere tend to get dearer.

Rate hike
When a central bank raises interest rates to cool rising prices.

8-K filing
The official notice a US-listed company must file to announce big events, like a CEO leaving.

GOLD

Gold's worst day in weeks

Gold futures fell about 2.9% to $3,885 an ounce, their lowest since October 2025, as higher rates and a firm dollar made it less appealing, Capp Notes and EBN report.

CHIPS

Not every chip fell

AMD rose 5.86% and Broadcom 5.54% even as Nvidia slid, Capp Notes reports. Taiwan's market fell 2.63%.

CRYPTO

Bitcoin slips 4%

Bitcoin fell about 4% to roughly $71,500, Capp Notes reports, as investors pulled back from riskier bets.

World Affairs

WHO'S DOING WHAT, AND WHY IT MATTERS

THE BIG STORY · IRAN WAR · STRAIT OF HORMUZ

Tankers burn in the Gulf as Washington talks of talks and Tehran says the strait stays shut

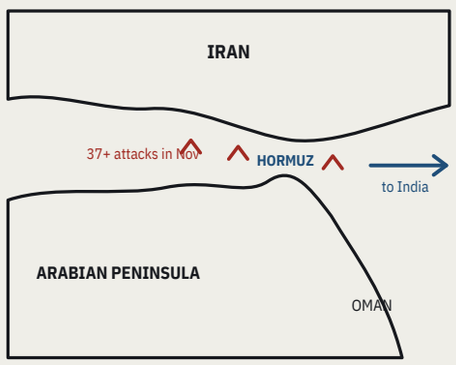

November has been the most dangerous month yet for ships near Hormuz, and the two sides can't even agree on whether they are negotiating.

Iran's Revolutionary Guards said three oil tankers caught fire on Tuesday after hitting naval mines, according to a world news round-up by ViewStorys, and monitoring firms have counted at least 37 attacks on ships in and around the Strait of Hormuz so far this month, the most since the war began. Separately, Saudi Arabia said debris from two ballistic missiles fell in the Mecca region, and blamed Yemen's Houthis, Reuters reports via Just Security.

The diplomacy, such as it is. The Wall Street Journal reports that US Vice President JD Vance is considering face-to-face talks with Iran's security chief Mohsen Rezaei, though US officials call this "preliminary". Rezaei says Iran is still waiting for America's answer to its seven conditions and that the strait will not reopen until they are met. Secretary of State Marco Rubio said in Paris there was "really no need for major combat operations any longer", while keeping the threat of force if Iran crosses "certain red lines".

Why it matters to everyone: about a fifth of the world's oil normally passes through this narrow channel. Every burning tanker pushes up oil prices, which is exactly what happened on Thursday (page 2).

THE WORLD'S BUSIEST OIL GATE

A rough sketch, not to scale. Attack count from monitoring firms, via ViewStorys.

THE INDIA ANGLE

India imports most of its crude oil, and a big share of it has traditionally come through Hormuz from Gulf suppliers. When the strait is shut or dangerous, ships take longer, costlier routes or don't come at all, insurance rates soar, and the oil bill goes up. That's why Brent's 3% jump on Thursday matters in Mumbai: it feeds into petrol prices, airline fares and the rupee (page 1). Closer to home, Delhi's air was still "poor", with an AQI of 299 on Wednesday morning, and some schools moved to hybrid classes.

AROUND THE WORLD

INDONESIA

NAVY · THE BIG STORY

A new heart for an old warship: INS Betwa gets a ₹498.58 crore refit, new diesel engines and modern weapons

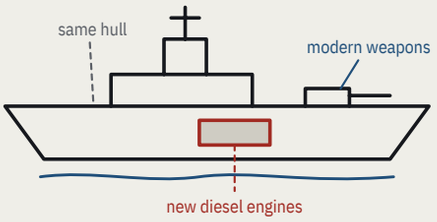

The Defence Ministry has signed the contract with Cochin Shipyard to "re-power" and upgrade the frigate, rather than retire it.

INS Betwa is a Brahmaputra-class frigate, a medium-sized warship built to escort fleets and hunt submarines and aircraft. On 11 November the Ministry of Defence signed a ₹498.58 crore contract with Cochin Shipyard in Kerala for its refit, re-powering and combat upgrade, The Week, DefenceWatch and India Defence Wire report. The Week says the work brings diesel engines and modern weapons to the ship.

Why upgrade instead of building new? A new frigate takes many years and costs many times more. Giving a sound hull fresh engines and new sensors and weapons can add years of useful life much faster and more cheaply. Think of it as fitting a new engine and electronics into a well-built old car you trust.

Meanwhile, along every coast: the Navy is coordinating Sea Vigil-26, a nine-day, pan-India exercise testing coastal defence and maritime security, DefenceWatch reports. And today, more than 3,300 Navy Agniveers and Coast Guard trainees pass out at INS Chilka in Odisha, the largest batch ever (we previewed it yesterday).

Series on the line at the Bay Oval: India need one win, and the fourth ODI has just begun

India lead 2–0 with two to play, so New Zealand must win today and on Sunday just to draw the series.

The fourth one-day international started at 7:30 AM IST at the Bay Oval in Mount Maunganui, near Tauranga, on New Zealand's North Island, so the result will come in later today. Here's the story so far: India won the first ODI in Auckland by five wickets and the second in Wellington by four runs, both decided by the DLS rain method, and the third in Hamilton was washed out without a ball bowled.

New Zealand play without fast bowler Lockie Ferguson, who tore a calf muscle. The fifth and final ODI is at the same ground on Sunday 15 November. Then the two-Test series begins: 19–23 November at the Basin Reserve, Wellington, and 27 November–1 December at Hagley Oval, Christchurch. India already won the T20 series 3–2 last month.

Also today: England play Australia in an ODI at Perth Stadium, and Sri Lanka's Test against Pakistan in Rawalpindi reaches its fifth and final day.

"The Seduction of Pessimism" by Morgan Housel, Collab Fund

In one line: pessimism sounds clever and optimism sounds naive, even though, over long stretches, things have mostly got better.

Housel, the author of The Psychology of Money (reviewed here on 11 November), asks why gloomy forecasts grab our attention far more than hopeful ones. His answers: bad news arrives suddenly and dramatically while progress happens slowly and quietly; a warning feels like someone looking out for you; and optimism can look like you're not paying attention. It's a perfect partner to today's book review, Factfulness, on page 7, and a useful calm-down read on a day of scary headlines about tankers and bond yields.

WORK · AMBITION | 20 MIN READ

"Superlinear Returns" by Paul Graham

In one line: in many parts of life, doing something twice as well doesn't get you twice the reward; it can get you ten times, or everything.

Graham's childhood lesson was that effort and reward rise in step: work a bit more, earn a bit more. Real life, he argues, often doesn't work like that. The best company in a market can take most of the profit, the best scientist gets most of the attention, and knowledge compounds as you learn. His advice: look for work where your results can grow on themselves, keep learning, and follow your curiosity, because that's usually where the big returns hide. Ambitious, clear, and full of "huh, that's true" moments.

STEAL THIS TRICK

Start with what you were taught wrong. Opening with a belief most readers share, then showing where it breaks, pulls people straight into the argument.

"Clearing and Settlement Process" by Zerodha Varsity

In one line: the behind-the-scenes journey that makes sure the shares you buy actually reach you, and the seller actually gets paid.

The next chapter in Varsity's beginner series, after yesterday's tour of the trading terminal. It follows one trade from the moment you press "buy" to the day the shares land in your demat account, and explains who does what along the way: your broker, the exchange, the clearing corporation and the depository. One update to keep in mind: India now settles most trades on T+1 (the next working day), faster than the older timeline some explanations use.

STEAL THIS TRICK

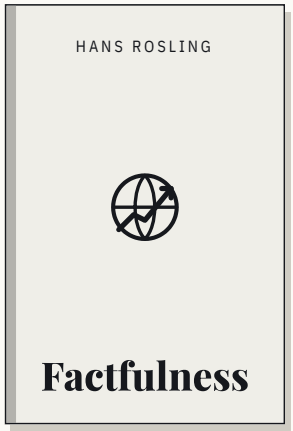

Follow one thing on its journey. Tracking a single trade step by step makes a complicated system easy to picture.

The Book Review

TODAY: NON-FICTION

Genre: Non-fiction · how the world works
First published: 2018
Authors: Hans Rosling, with Ola Rosling and Anna Rosling Rönnlund
Length: about 340 pages
Read it: a chapter a night

REVIEW · FACTFULNESS

Why most of us think the world is worse than it is, and ten simple habits to see it clearly

Hans Rosling was a Swedish doctor and statistician who spent years asking audiences simple multiple-choice questions about the world: what share of girls finish primary school in poor countries, how many people live in extreme poverty, how life expectancy has changed. Again and again, highly educated people did worse than random guessing. He liked to joke that chimpanzees picking answers at random would beat them.

The reason, he argues, isn't stupidity. It's ten built-in instincts that bend our picture of the world. The gap instinct splits everything into "us" and "them", rich and poor, when most people actually live somewhere in the middle. The negativity instinct notices bad news and misses slow improvement. The fear instinct makes rare dangers feel common. The urgency instinct pushes us to act now, before thinking.

Each chapter pairs a story from Rosling's life (as a young doctor in Mozambique, as an adviser during the Ebola outbreak in West Africa) with a simple chart and a rule of thumb. It's warm, funny and surprisingly hopeful, without pretending problems don't exist. On a day of alarming headlines, it's the perfect book to keep you calm and curious.

> "The world cannot be understood without numbers. And it cannot be understood with numbers alone."
> Hans Rosling, near the end of the book. It sums up his whole approach.

THREE THINGS THIS BOOK TEACHES

Bad and better

Something can be bad and improving at the same time. Hold both thoughts at once.

Compare the number

A single big number means little. Ask: compared to what, and per how many people?

Slow down when scared

Fear and urgency are when we make our worst decisions. Take a breath and check the data.

THE TAKE · OUR OPINION

No company should depend on one person. Nvidia's shock is a lesson for every boardroom, and every investor

For three decades, Nvidia and Jensen Huang were almost the same word. That's a strength when things go well: one founder with a clear vision can move fast. But it is also a risk, and on Thursday investors were reminded of it, with the shares at one point down about 14% in a single day.

Good companies plan for the day their leader leaves, whether by choice, illness or scandal. It's called succession planning, and the best boards treat it as routine, not as an emergency. Naming an interim CEO and a new board chair within hours suggests Nvidia had at least some plan.

Our view: the same lesson applies to your own money. If one company, one sector or one star fund manager makes up most of your savings, you're carrying a "founder risk" of your own. Spread it out.

This is the Gazette's opinion, not investment advice.

MONEY IDEA OF THE DAY: CONCENTRATION RISK

If one investment is a big slice of everything you own, a single bad day for it becomes a bad day for you. A simple rule many planners use: no single share should be more than about 5–10% of your portfolio. Index funds do this spreading for you automatically, by holding many companies at once.

DID YOU KNOW?

Born at a diner

Nvidia's three founders, including Jensen Huang, planned the company in 1993 over meals at a Denny's restaurant in San Jose, California.

A word for today's fear

Fear of Friday the 13th has a tongue-twister name: paraskevidekatriaphobia, from Greek words for "Friday" and "thirteen".

Cricket by a volcano

Mount Maunganui, the town where India play today, is named after Mauao, an extinct volcanic cone that rises above the beach.

A black pool

Dublin, where European leaders meet this week, gets its name from the Irish "Dubh Linn", meaning "black pool".

The sword-swallowing statistician

Hans Rosling (page 7) ended one of his TED talks by swallowing a sword, to show that the seemingly impossible is possible.

A river's name

The Ebola virus is named after the Ebola River in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, near where it was first identified in 1976.

Ten Words for Today

LEARN THEM, THEN USE ONE BEFORE DINNER

1 Abdicate verb · AB-dih-kayt

To give up a position of power or a responsibility.

"Some called Huang's exit an abdication; the company simply called it a resignation."

2 Interim adj. · IN-ter-im

Temporary; filling a gap until something permanent is arranged.

"Colette Kress is Nvidia's interim CEO."

3 Impasse noun · IM-pass

A situation where no progress is possible because people can't agree.

"Talks over Hormuz remain at an impasse."

4 Myopic adj. · my-OP-ik

Short-sighted; not thinking about the long term.

"Selling everything after one bad day is myopic."

5 Mettle noun · MET-ul

The ability to keep going bravely in a difficult situation.

"Today's match will test New Zealand's mettle."

6 Nascent adj. · NAY-sunt

Just beginning to exist or develop.

"The Air Force's nascent AI tools were launched on Thursday."

7 Salient adj. · SAY-lee-unt

Most noticeable or important.

"The salient point: oil rose 3% in a day."

8 Steadfast adj. · STED-fast

Firm and unwavering in loyalty or purpose.

"Foreign investors stayed steadfast buyers of Indian shares."

9 Fastidious adj. · fa-STID-ee-us

Very careful about accuracy and detail; hard to please.

"Folding a fitted sheet rewards a fastidious hand."

10 Zenith noun · ZEN-ith

The highest point of something.

How to fold a fitted bedsheet into a neat, flat square

The elastic corners make fitted sheets look impossible to fold, so most end up as a crumpled ball. The secret is to tuck the corners inside each other first.

WHAT YOU'LL NEED

A clean, dry fitted sheet	A clear table or bed to lay it on	Two minutes and a little patience

1 Find two corners

Hold the sheet inside out. Slip one hand into each of the two corner pockets on one short side, like wearing two big mittens.

2 Tuck one into the other

Bring your hands together and fold the right-hand corner over the left one, so the first pocket fits snugly over the second. Now one hand holds both.

3 Do the other end

Find the two corners at the opposite short side and tuck them into each other the same way.

4 Bring the pairs together

Fold the sheet in half and tuck one pair of nested corners into the other pair. All four corners now sit inside each other in one hand.

5 Lay it flat

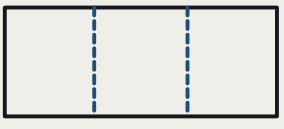

Put the sheet on the table. The elastic will form a curved edge. Fold that curved edge inwards so you're left with a rectangle with straight sides, and smooth it out.

6 Fold to size

Fold the rectangle in thirds lengthways, then in half or thirds again until it matches the size of your other folded linen. Tip: tuck it inside its matching pillowcase so the whole set stays together.

THE CORNER TRICK

Once the corners are nested, it folds like a flat sheet.

⚠ SAFETY

- Fold on a table or the floor, not while standing on the bed; mattresses are wobbly.
- Let sheets from a hot dryer or iron cool before handling, and check for stray safety pins or clips.
- Fold sheets only when fully dry; damp linen stored folded can grow mould.

PRO TIP

Fold sheets straight out of the wash basket while they're still warm and soft: fewer creases, and you won't need to iron them.
