THE BIG STORY · BACK FROM THE HOLIDAY, AND RUNNING

Sensex jumps 773 points as car makers and government banks lead the charge to the market's best level since February

On the first day back after Balipratipada, Indian shares rose almost everywhere you looked. The Nifty is now up nearly 10% in November alone.

The Sensex closed on Wednesday at 81,879.40, up 772.75 points (0.95%), and the Nifty 50 at 25,255.05, up 210.40 points (0.84%), HDFC Sky reports. Both are at their highest closing levels since late February. It wasn't just the big names: on the whole exchange, 2,756 shares rose and only 1,555 fell, and smaller companies did even better than the giants (the Nifty Smallcap 100 rose 1.61%).

Who led? Car maker Mahindra was the Nifty's star, up 5.30%, after a report that the government will make electric vehicles the default choice for official cars, Kotak Neo says. IndiGo's owner InterGlobe rose 4.33% (cheaper oil means cheaper jet fuel) and Trent, which runs Zudio and Westside, 3.32%. Government-owned banks had a great day too: the Nifty PSU Bank index rose 2.94%.

Who lagged? Adani Ports fell 1.84% and ICICI Bank 1.10%. IT companies such as Tech Mahindra and HCL Tech slipped, as some global money moved away from tech and AI shares.

Why the cheer? Three reasons, says HDFC Sky: oil got cheaper, foreign investors kept buying (about $5.68 billion of Indian shares so far in November, their biggest month since September 2024), and company results have been solid. Today's catch: overnight, chip giant Nvidia tumbled after US markets closed (page 2), and HDFC Sky's early signals pointed to a softer start this morning.

ⓘ NEW TO THIS? WORDS FROM TODAY'S STORY

Market breadth
How many shares rose versus fell. 2,756 up against 1,555 down means the rally was broad, not just a few giants.

PSU bank
A public sector bank, owned mostly by the government, such as SBI or Bank of Baroda.

QIP
Qualified institutional placement: a listed company raising money by selling new shares directly to big investors.

SIP
Systematic investment plan: putting a fixed amount into a mutual fund every month.

WHAT THIS MEANS FOR YOU

Gold got a little cheaper: 24-carat fell to about ₹1,41,980 per 10 g on Wednesday, with silver near ₹2,00,000 a kg (Goodreturns, via The United Indian; city rates differ by a few thousand). The rupee closed at 93.69 per dollar, its best close in seven months, because cheaper oil means India needs fewer dollars. That's good for anyone paying for a foreign trip or an overseas course fee.

VARSITY-STYLE EXPLAINER: WHY "BREADTH" MATTERS

The Sensex has only 30 companies, so a few heavyweights can drag it up while most shares fall. Breadth is the honesty check. Think of a class's average marks: they can rise because two toppers scored 100, or because almost everyone did better. Wednesday was the second kind.

AN AI CHEER · A BOARDROOM SHOCK · OIL BOUNCES

THE BIG STORY · A DAY OF TWO HALVES

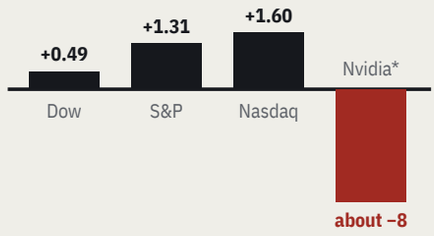

Wall Street rallies on a blockbuster AI report card, then Nvidia slides 8% after the bell on news about its boss

CoreWeave, a company that rents out AI computing power, calmed fears that the AI boom is fading. A few hours later, a report about Nvidia's leadership undid part of the mood.

The good half. On Wednesday the S&P 500, America's main index of 500 big companies, rose 1.31% to 7,619.38. The tech-heavy Nasdaq climbed 1.60% to 25,466.19 and the Dow 0.49% to 52,486.49, Yahoo Finance/AP reports. The spark was CoreWeave. Its July–September revenue was about $3.66 billion, up 168% on a year earlier and above the $3.55 billion analysts expected. It raised its forecast for 2026 to $13–13.3 billion, and says customers have signed contracts worth $132.5 billion that it hasn't billed yet (Benzinga). Its shares soared about 25%, and every company in the Philadelphia chip index rose.

The shock half. After the market closed, Nvidia, the world's best-known maker of AI chips, fell more than 8% in after-hours trading, to about $159.51, CBS News reports. The trigger was a Wall Street Journal report that Nvidia's board is preparing to remove chief executive Jensen Huang, following a probe into his personal conduct that the company announced on 8 November. Nvidia had closed the normal session up 2.87% at $173.73. Reports say its market value has shrunk by more than $450 billion since the probe was announced. Nothing has been decided as far as the reports we read show.

COREWEAVE: SALES, THEN AND NOW

Last year's figure worked back from the reported 168% rise.

WHY SHOULD SOMEONE IN MUMBAI CARE?

Indian IT and chip-linked shares often take their mood from America, and a big Nvidia fall overnight can make the first hour in Mumbai jittery. But Wednesday also showed money moving out of US tech and into places like India, which helped our market (page 1). The thing to watch is oil: Brent briefly fell below $90 a barrel on Tuesday, its lowest in almost two months, before bouncing to about $92 on Wednesday.

JARGON BUSTER

After-hours trading
Buying and selling shares after the official close. Fewer people trade, so prices can swing wildly.

Guidance
A company's own forecast of its future sales or profit. Raising it signals confidence.

Backlog
Work customers have signed up and promised to pay for, but which hasn't been delivered yet.

Market value
Share price × number of shares: what the whole company is worth on the stock market.

CHIPS

Every chip share up

Micron rose nearly 12% and AMD more than 7% in the CoreWeave rally, TradingKey reports, a sharp turn after last week's AI sell-off.

OIL

Brent's round-trip

Brent dipped to a two-month low of $89.16 on Tuesday, then recovered to about $92 on Wednesday, HDFC Sky reports.

GOLD

Silver outshines gold

On India's MCX exchange, December silver futures rose 2.92% and gold 0.75% on Wednesday afternoon, Kotak Neo reports.

WHO'S DOING WHAT, AND WHY IT MATTERS

THE BIG STORY · UKRAINE WAR · ABU DHABI

Two days of talks, one deal: Russia and Ukraine agree to a large swap of prisoners of war, but no ceasefire

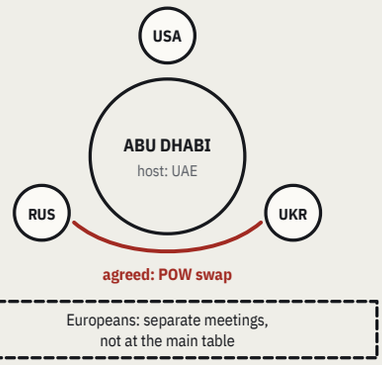

It was the first face-to-face round between the two sides in about nine months, hosted by the United Arab Emirates and steered by the United States.

When the talks in Abu Dhabi ended on Wednesday, the only solid result was a large exchange of prisoners of war, AP reports via PBS. Russia's chief negotiator, Vladimir Medinsky, and Ukraine's, Rustem Umerov, both confirmed it, though Medinsky called it an agreement "in principle". Neither side said how many soldiers will go home. US envoy Jared Kushner said the final number would be settled on Thursday, and a Russian military official said the swap could happen within two to three weeks.

On the big questions, where the front line stops and whether the guns fall silent, there was no breakthrough, Euronews reports. Medinsky said there was "mutual understanding" on some issues and that more talks would follow. European officials were in Abu Dhabi for separate meetings with the Ukrainians and Americans but did not sit at the main table, and Medinsky openly questioned why they were there.

What next: Euronews reports that US envoys are preparing to meet Russia's President Vladimir Putin. A prisoner swap is small next to a peace deal, but negotiators often start with such swaps because each side can deliver them quickly, and they build a little trust.

WHO WAS IN THE ROOM

As described by AP and Euronews, 11 November.

THE INDIA ANGLE

India is trying to help with one practical piece of this war: safe "food corridors" for grain ships in the Black Sea. After PM Modi spoke to Ukraine's President Zelenskyy on 9 November, Zelenskyy said India was willing to mediate them, Al Jazeera reports, and External Affairs Minister S. Jaishankar spoke to Russia's Sergei Lavrov the same day. India's foreign ministry says it is talking to both "at the highest level". It's personal for India: the ministry said on 3 November that five Indian sailors were killed in attacks on ships in the Black Sea, and two are missing.

NAVY · THE BIG STORY

More than 3,300 young sailors march out tomorrow at INS Chilka, the biggest batch the Odisha academy has ever trained

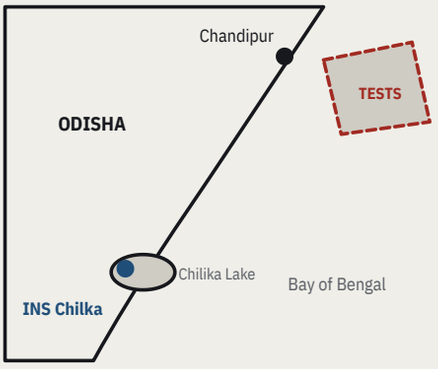

The ninth batch of Navy Agniveers finishes 16 weeks of basic training with a passing-out parade on Friday 13 November.

On the shores of Chilika Lake in Odisha sits INS Chilka, the Navy's school for new sailors. On Friday, more than 3,300 trainees from the ninth batch of Agniveers will march in their passing-out parade, which SSBCrack describes as the largest batch ever to graduate there. Trainees from the Coast Guard, called Naviks, take part too.

Basic naval training of this kind usually covers drill, fitness, swimming, seamanship and firefighting, along with the traditions of the service. After the parade they head to specialist schools and then to ships. The academy will also release "Ankur", a new bilingual magazine written by the trainees themselves.

Meanwhile, up the coast: the warning zone for DRDO's "experimental flight trials" off Chandipur stays in force until 4 PM on Friday, with test windows of 9–11 AM and 2–4 PM today and tomorrow, idrw.org reports. The missile has still not been named, and no result had been announced at press time.

One more win and the series is India's: the ODI side moves to Tauranga for Friday's fourth match

India lead 2–0 with two to play after rain washed out Hamilton. India's under-19s also play a semi-final this morning.

This tour has been a lesson in rain rules. India won the first ODI in Auckland by five wickets under the DLS method, with Anshul Kamboj named player of the match, and the second in Wellington by just four runs, again on DLS, after New Zealand were bowled out for 134 and Gurnoor Brar took 4 for 30, ESPNcricinfo reports. The third, in Hamilton, didn't see a ball.

So India cannot lose the series, and a win in the fourth ODI at the Bay Oval, Mount Maunganui, on Friday 13 November (7:30 AM IST) would seal it. New Zealand are without fast bowler Lockie Ferguson, who tore a calf muscle. Earlier on the tour India also won the five-match T20 series 3–2, and a Test follows from 19 November.

This morning: India's under-19 team plays Afghanistan in the second semi-final of the U19 Asia Cup at 10:30 AM IST, while Bangladesh meet Pakistan in the other, SportzCraazy lists.

The Reading Room

THREE PIECES OF GREAT WRITING, AND WHAT TO LEARN FROM THEM

Today's menu: why we care so much what other people think, a short essay on what actually matters in a short life, and a peek inside the screen traders stare at all day.

01

MIND · CONFIDENCE | 25 MIN READ

"Taming the Mammoth: Why You Should Stop Caring What Other People Think" by Tim Urban, Wait But Why

In one line: the part of your brain that panics about other people's opinions was built for life in a small tribe, and it's badly out of date.

Urban's idea is that each of us carries a woolly "Social Survival Mammoth". Fifty thousand years ago, being disliked by your tribe of a hundred people could mean death, so the mammoth learned to care desperately about approval. Today it still makes us choose careers, clothes and even partners to please people who barely notice. With his famous stick-figure drawings, he shows how to recognise the mammoth, how to calm it down, and how to let your real self make the decisions. Funny, warm, and quietly life-changing.

STEAL THIS TRICK

Turn a feeling into a character. Giving a vague fear a name and a body (a mammoth!) makes it easy to talk about and hard to forget.

LIFE · TIME | 8 MIN READ

"Life is Short" by Paul Graham

In one line: once you truly feel how short life is, you get ruthless about cutting out the nonsense and generous with the things that matter.

Graham noticed the shortness of life when he did the sums on how much time he had left with his young children. His advice is simple: learn to spot "bullshit" (his word for pointless meetings, online arguments, red tape and the like) and avoid it; don't wait to do the things you care about; and savour the time you do have, because good moments pass faster than you think. It pairs nicely with today's Take on page 9.

STEAL THIS TRICK

Open with a personal moment. A big, abstract truth ("life is short") lands harder when it starts with one small, real scene from the writer's own life.

MONEY · INDIA | 10 MIN READ

"The Trading Terminal" by Zerodha Varsity

In one line: a guided tour of the screen where shares are actually bought and sold, so the numbers stop looking like a wall of noise.

The next stop in Varsity's beginner series, after yesterday's chapter on market jargon. It explains what you see on a trading screen: the list of shares you're watching, the "market depth" showing who wants to buy and sell at which price, and the different kinds of orders you can place, such as a market order (buy now at whatever price) and a limit order (buy only at my price). After reading it, the movers table on our page 1 will make a lot more sense.

STEAL THIS TRICK

Explain with the real thing. Varsity walks through actual screenshots, labelling one box at a time, instead of describing the screen in the abstract.

REVIEW · TO KILL A MOCKINGBIRD

A child's-eye view of a grown-up injustice, and the quiet father who stands up to a whole town

The story is told by Scout Finch, a fierce, funny little girl growing up in the sleepy town of Maycomb, Alabama, in the 1930s. For the first half of the book she, her brother Jem and their friend Dill spend summers daring each other to approach the house of Boo Radley, a neighbour nobody ever sees, and inventing wild stories about him.

Then the real world arrives. Scout's father, Atticus, a calm lawyer, agrees to defend Tom Robinson, a Black man falsely accused of attacking a white woman. The town turns on the family. Through Scout's innocent eyes we watch the trial, the prejudice, and her father's patient courage, and we understand far more than she does, which is what makes the book so moving.

It's simple to read, often very funny, and it asks a question that never gets old: what does it take to do the right thing when everyone around you wants you to do the easy one? The title comes from Atticus's advice that it's a sin to kill a mockingbird, a bird that does nothing but sing for us.

> "You never really understand a person until you consider things from his point of view... until you climb into his skin and walk around in it."
> Atticus Finch, to Scout, early in the book. It's the heart of the story.

THREE THINGS THIS BOOK TEACHES

Walk in their shoes

Most unkindness comes from not imagining another person's life. Try it before you judge.

Courage is quiet

Atticus says real courage is starting something you know you may lose, and seeing it through anyway.

Rumours aren't people

The scary "Boo" of the children's stories turns out to be someone quite different. Fear fills gaps with monsters.

THE TAKE · OUR OPINION

The market is up almost 10% this month. Enjoy it, but don't let it change your plan

November has been a party on Dalal Street: the Sensex and Nifty are up nearly 10% this month, HDFC Sky reports. When numbers like that fill the news, it's natural to feel you're missing out, and to want to pour in money now, or to sell everything and "lock in" gains.

Both urges come from the same place: letting the last few weeks decide what you do for the next few years. Markets that rise fast can also fall fast; just look at Nvidia, which climbed nearly 3% in the day and then lost about 8% in an evening.

Our view: the people who do best are usually the boring ones, who keep their monthly SIP going in good months and bad, and who only change their plan when their life changes, not when the headlines do.

This is the Gazette's opinion, not investment advice.

MONEY IDEA OF THE DAY: RUPEE-COST AVERAGING

Put the same ₹5,000 into a fund every month. When prices are high, it buys fewer units; when they're low, it buys more. Over time your average cost per unit evens out, without you ever having to guess the right moment. That's the quiet magic behind the ₹32,160 crore Indians put into SIPs in October (page 1).

DID YOU KNOW?

A sea that's half sweet

Chilika Lake, home of INS Chilka, is a brackish lagoon, a mix of sea and river water, and one of the largest of its kind in the world. Thousands of migratory birds winter there.

The goalkeeper's idea

The penalty kick was proposed by an Irish goalkeeper, William McCrum, and added to football's laws in 1891.

Father of the gazelle

"Abu Dhabi", where Wednesday's talks were held, is usually translated as "father of the gazelle" in Arabic.

One book only (almost)

Harper Lee published just one other novel, Go Set a Watchman, in 2015, 55 years after To Kill a Mockingbird (page 7).

The copycat bird

The northern mockingbird can imitate other birds, frogs, and even car alarms and squeaky gates.

The Strip isn't in Vegas

Most of the famous Las Vegas Strip, where F1 races later this month, lies outside the city limits, in towns called Paradise and Winchester.

Figures from pages 1–7. Facts from standard reference works, the Chilika Development Authority and The FA's history of the laws of the game.

Ten Words for Today

LEARN THEM, THEN USE ONE BEFORE DINNER

1 Tangible adj. · TAN-juh-bul

Real and definite; something you can actually see, touch or measure.

"The prisoner swap was the only tangible result of the talks."

2 Interlocutor noun · in-ter-LOK-yoo-ter

A person who takes part in a conversation, often on behalf of others.

"The UAE acted as a trusted interlocutor."

3 Buoyant adj. · BOY-unt

Cheerful and confident; for markets, rising strongly.

"Dalal Street was buoyant after the holiday."

4 Conciliatory adj. · kun-SIL-ee-uh-tor-ee

Meant to calm anger and make peace.

"A small, conciliatory step like a prisoner swap can open the door to bigger talks."

5 Precarious adj. · prih-KAIR-ee-us

Not safe or firm; likely to fall or go wrong.

"The rally looks precarious after Nvidia's slide."

6 Empathy noun · EM-puh-thee

The ability to understand and share another person's feelings.

"Atticus teaches Scout empathy."

7 Augur verb · AW-ger

To be a sign of what will happen.

"A clean sheet augurs well for India's semi-final."

8 Beleaguered adj. · bih-LEE-gerd

In serious difficulty, under pressure from many sides.

"The beleaguered chipmaker lost $450 billion in value."

9 Fervent adj. · FUR-vunt

Having or showing very strong, sincere feeling.

"She is a fervent supporter of Indian football."

10 Solace noun · SOL-iss

Comfort when you are sad or worried.

How to wrap a gift neatly, with sharp corners and hardly any tape

Wedding season is here. A box wrapped crisply looks twice as thoughtful, and the trick is not skill but measuring: most messy parcels simply use far too much paper.

WHAT YOU'LL NEED

A box (wrap loose gifts in a box first)	Wrapping paper and sharp scissors	Clear tape, ideally double-sided

1 Measure the width

Lay the paper face down and the box on top, upside down. Wrap the paper round the box: you need enough to go all the way round plus about 5 cm of overlap. Cut.

2 Measure the ends

The paper sticking out at each end should be a little more than half the box's height. Too much and the ends turn into thick, crumpled lumps. Trim if needed.

3 Make a clean edge

Fold over about 1 cm along one long edge of the paper to hide the raw cut. Bring the other side up the box, then the folded edge over it, and fix with one strip of tape (or a hidden piece of double-sided tape).

4 Push in the sides

At one end, press the two side flaps inwards against the box. They will form two triangle-shaped flaps, one at the top and one at the bottom. Crease every edge firmly with your thumbnail.

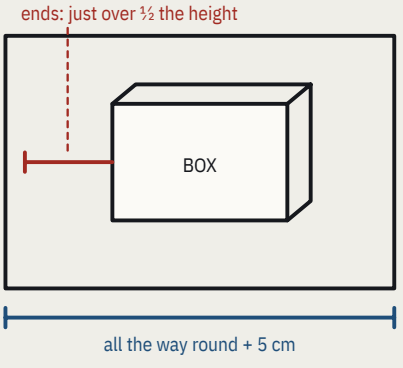

5 Top down, bottom up

Fold the top triangle down. Fold over 1 cm of the bottom triangle's tip for a neat edge, then lift it up over the top one and tape. Repeat at the other end.

6 Finish

Run your fingers along all twelve edges of the box to sharpen them. Add a ribbon or a simple tag, and the tape will barely show.

HOW MUCH PAPER?

Less paper means flatter, crisper ends.

⚠ SAFETY

- Cut away from your body and keep fingers clear of the blades; slide, don't snip, along long edges.
- Keep scissors, tape and ribbon away from small children and pets; ribbon can be a choking hazard.
- Never wrap anything hot, sharp or leaking without a sturdy box around it.

PRO TIP

To cut paper in one clean stroke, open the scissors slightly and slide them along the fold instead of snipping. It's how shop staff do it so fast.
